Dempsey's Speed, Strength and Hitting Ability Should Give Him Victory July 2.

By CHARLES F. MATHISON.

Those who favor the chances of Georges Carpentier in the battle with Jack Dempsey on July 2 in Boyle's Thirty Acres are wont to draw a pleasing picture of the Frenchman luring his opponent into a feeling of false security. This is to be followed by a lightning feint, and before the amazed Dempsey can gather his wits and arms the right hand of the European champion is to crash against the American's jaw, the band will play "The Marseillaise" and everybody will shout "Vive le Carpentier!"

The possibilities contained in a heavyweight championship bout are unbounded, and it may be that a scene such as that depicted may actually take place. The writer, who was at the ringside in the Holborn Stadium, London, when Carpentier put Joe Beckett to rout in less than a minute. is aware that Carpentier under certain conditions is capable of vanquishing opponents in jig time. At the same time it may be advisable to consider the calibre of the men so disposed of

It then became apparent that Carpentier's reputation for quickness and terrific hitting had been gained at the expense of a third rate boxer.
But the European champion had an-

Bombardler Wells is the man, and it is generally conceded that the most brittle jaw that ever was endangered in a squared circle. Al Palzer had no difficulty in reaching the Wells jaw, and Palzer was one of the slowest heavyweights in the game, albeit he possessed the courage that characterizes Moran. The fact that Carpentier in his middleweight form defeated Willie Lewis on points in twenty rounds (Lewis scoring a knockdown in the eighth round), received the decision over Harry Lewis, a Philadelphia middleweight, in twenty rounds and received the award over Jeff Smith in twenty rounds on points is a clear indication of Carpentier's middleweight ability.

In palliation of Carpentier's defeats at the hands of Klaus and Papke, it is claimed that the Frenchman was but 18 years of age and was overwheimed by mature and rugged fighters. This argument is offset by the well known fact that nearly all inhabitants of Southern Europe, notably France. Spain and Italy, develop physically at an early age. After Mayor Edward La Bader and former Sheriff Arthur J. Perkins. After Mayor Bader introduced the champion to the Governor the quartet of celebrities adjourned to the restaurant, where they lunched and chatted for two hours.

When they emerged from the restaurant Dempsey was asked if he had anything to say about the event, but he smiled, shook his head and looked at the Mayor. The latter said that Dempsey had visited Gov. Edwards at the request of the New Jersey Executive, and that the meeting had been purely social.

Gov. Edwards was more communicative, and when his attention was called to the fact that the Camen Ministerial Union had adopted resolutions censuring him for permitting the Dempsey-Carpentier contest to be staged in that State and also for sending an invitation to President Harding to attend the encounter, the Governor said:

"The ministers who criticise me make the mistake of referring to champion—the devent with the sensity of the conversation and the incident was the subject of conversation all about the city.
